Clover

Aug 2025 - Present

Content Design Architect

Content System Architecture: Design a three-layer content system (Foundation → Tooling → Infrastructure) as the sole content architect, transforming a three-person content design function into a scalable, systems-driven operating model aligned to a C-level mandate of infrastructure over execution.

Voice & Quality Definition: Established Clover's content voice and developed a content quality rubric with five measurable dimensions, creating enforceable standards that product designers apply autonomously through a partner-observation model with design vertical leaders.

AI Content Tooling: Built and deployed an AI-powered UX writing assistant enabling product designers to generate on-brand, guidelines-compliant content independently. Evaluating next-generation platform options, including deeper design tool integration and Claude, to evolve the tooling layer through a two-horizon rollout.

Strategic Integration: Position the content system as enabling infrastructure for a merchant-first, journey-driven product model across verticals.

Thought Leadership: Published in UX Content Collective on the evolution from content designer to content architect, contributing to industry discourse on the future of the discipline.
